It was way back in July when I used to use Windows 2000. Well, I didn't get the chance to write about it then as there was no way to get Windows 2000 data from the update engine. Well that is over. Now using Windows 7 I can use Windows 2000 PC Backup to restore windows 2000 data on to my Windows 7 PC. I have used this feature before but now I will let you know how to do it with ease. Windows 2000 PC Backup is a tool to backup a computer and restore it from a previous backup. The application will create a backup of your computer from various disk partitions, your operating system, individual files, system registry, and program settings. It also will make a backup of all the installed programs. The backup application is lightweight with a great user interface. It requires no installation and it's a free tool which means you can download it from the Microsoft web site.

Venus is a giant planet located in the Earth's shadow. Its diameter is 7056 kilometers, its mass is 9.5% of Earth's and its volume is 49% bigger than Earth's. The atmosphere, which has a pressure of 0.6 atmosphere, is comprised of 96.9% carbon dioxide. Venus's day is 243 Earth days long, which makes it the second planet with the longest day period on the planet Mercury. Its year is 224 days long. Venus orbits the Sun at a distance of about 484,000 kilometers. It takes 224 days to rotate on its axis, and 11.2 Earth hours to complete one rotation. Venus does not have a magnetosphere, and its surface is covered in thick clouds made of sulfuric acid. It rotates in the same direction as the Sun, so its days are always marked by the Sun rising to the east. Venus is classified as a gas giant, but it has the same composition as the rocky planets. Its surface is covered in geysers, lava, volcanic vents and plateaus. Mars is a planet in the Solar System. It is the fourth planet from the Sun and the second-closest planet to Earth. The two planets are sometimes called the terrestrial planets because they have mostly rocky surfaces and, with few exceptions, are Earth-like. It is believed that Mars was once a more Earth-like planet, and it is thought that Mars could have supported life. The planet is named after the Roman god of war. The official Roman name for Mars was given as in the Roman Republic, "Mars", though in the later Empire, "Martius", from the god's day of the month of March. (Also, later the planet's name was officially given as "Ares", which is the god's Greek name.) Venus Venus is the closest
