We carry a:Q: How to sum over a range of indices in numpy? I would like to add to an array a constant times the sum of a range of indices. I can accomplish this by writing: result = np.zeros(mydata.shape) for index in range(0,6): result[index] = mydata[0:index]+mydata[index+1:6] But this seems inefficient for large arrays. Is there a more efficient way to accomplish this? A: So I believe you're making an array of zeros, then overwriting each slice with a sum of that slice: result[:] = np.zeros(mydata.shape)
