It was built by his son-in-law Christopher Neville in 1771, but later entirely rebuilt in 1814 by architect William Young. It was partly damaged by fire in December 2014. Neville Robert Neville of Corby (1531-1614) was Sheriff of Northamptonshire in 1591, and received the commission from Queen Elizabeth I of England in 1586 to raise troops for the Spanish Netherlands and found the first English Regiment of Guards. He was appointed Lord Lieutenant of Northamptonshire in 1591 and his son-in-law Christopher Neville (c.1575-1632) inherited the house in 1614. Young William Young (1748-1824) was an architect who worked in Northamptonshire, Lincolnshire and Hertfordshire. He was born in Warham, Norfolk, and is first recorded in Northamptonshire in 1774. He was a pupil of James Paine and became a Fellow of the Royal Society in 1781. The Gazetteer of the British and Foreign State Papers for 1698 lists him as the architect for an Osborne estate at Clifton Hall, Swanscombe. In 1785 he was made a member of the Household of King George III and became famous for his Battle Abbey Pavilion which was one of the first Neo-Classical mansions in England. Neville property The land was called Muntone and remained in the hands of the Neville family until Richard Neville's grandson Thomas bought it in 1664. His son Thomas Neville (1711-1755) was a Rector at Benham and bought Osbournes Castle in 1741. Christopher Neville (c.1575-1632), Lord Mayor of London in 1626, married Thomas Neville's daughter. Osborne House was rebuilt in 1771 for him by his c6a93da74d
