[P3D] FS2Crew: RAAS Professional (P3D 64 Bit) With Lucky Patcher

there really isnt a need for any additional firewall settings for roku. once installed, you can view and modify the firewall settings on the roku as needed. however, neoware says that the firewall settings you set on your roku will not be accessed by ezremote, and so they are only needed in rare cases for specific uses or if youre trying to configure a different firewall product on the same network. you will likely set other firewall settings on your network anyway, and you will also want to open the ports that roku requires to run, but the firewall settings are not accessed by neoware with ezremote. therefore, these settings have no real effect. enablelisten: if you connect to your roku via network, you need to set this property to true in the connections folder of ezremote to allow your computer to detect the roku. if you connect to the roku via http or https (directly, over the web), this property is needed. the other settings that youll need to set arent related to the firewall settings on the roku. instead, you should modify the network settings that neoware uses to identify and connect to your network. the ezremote home appliance identifies your network by the name that you assigned when you configuartd it. this should match the name that you set in the network tab of the neoware configuration screen. in the neoware configuration screen, you will see a tab called network. this tab allows you to set the ip address, subnet mask, and dns server settings that your appliance will use to connect to the network. these settings will vary based on what type of network you have, and neoware requires that you set the correct settings for your network. here, you can see that i set my ip address to 192.168.1.1 and my subnet mask to 255.255.0. note that this is the address that my ipcam is identifying by default, but it can change depending on the type of router you have. note that you do not need to provide dns information. however, if your router is set to use dhcp (which it should be), you will need to set the dns server to the ip address of your router. i set the dns server here to 192.
